Najd climate & architecture

AR-120
Prof: Hisham Mortada
Student: Abdul aziz alzahrani
ID:1741349

Definition

Old houses in Najd took a special architectural style commensurate with the elements and capabilities of that period, so the houses were built from mud reinforced with straw sticks and roofed with atlal trunks and palm fronds

Division

It had divisions and names that usually begin with the majlis, which is the place where guests are received and seated, and it is called / coffee / and is built in one of its corners / Alkmaar / It is a decorative form made up of carved shelves that come in length of approximately one and a half meters and a height and depth of up to forty centimeters and shelves are on top of each other at a height from the ground It reaches three meters and is built of white plaster

Division

Arish, the place for the family meeting, which is like a hall, but it is open to the yard or the yard of the house and is decorated with columns carved with palm leaves and al-Athal wood and hung on its bristle wood to keep food.

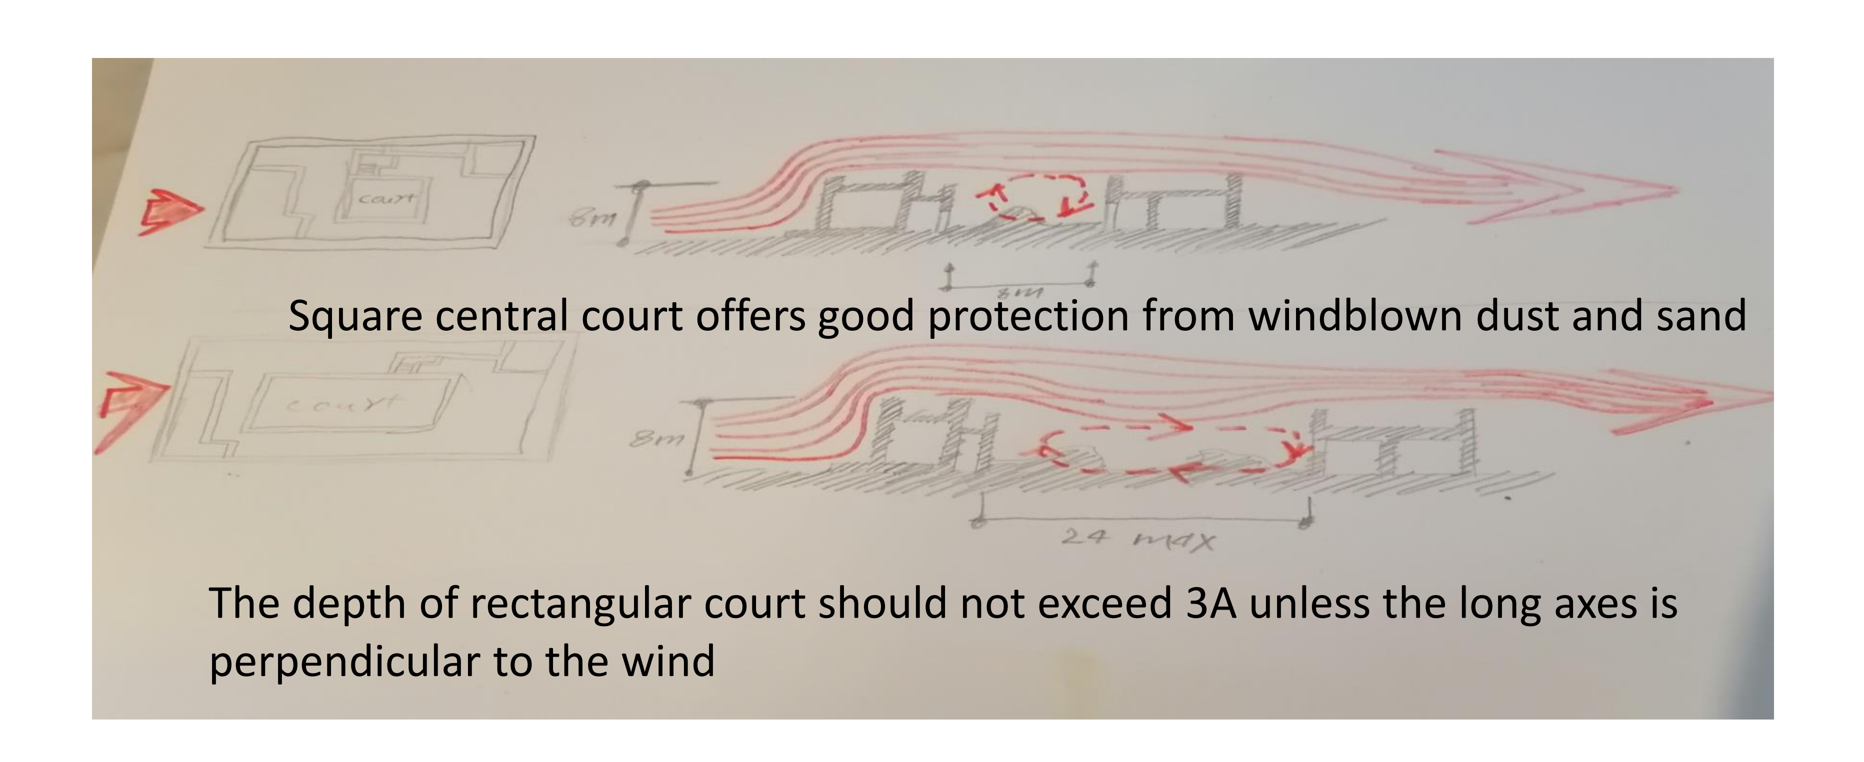

The nibbler is the place for guests to eat meals that were prepared on high, round trays like old joan, and in the tongs are energies for ventilation, and a book made of palm wicker hangs on its walls.

Division

Roshen, which is the bedroom and different from the bedroom, employ construction by placing pegs for hanging and recesses and voids for storage.
The kitchen is the place to cook and prepare food, and place the suitable items and pots in it

Al-Jissah is a place prepared for stacking and dressing dates, and it is built from gravel and plaster, and an opening is placed in the front and a small opening at the bottom

Square central court offers good protection from windblown dust and sand

The depth of rectangular court should not exceed 3A unless the long axes is perpendicular to the wind